

Matroids

Angeliki Metallinou

National and Kapodistrian University of Athens, Greece

30th Applications of Computer Algebra - ACA 2025

This talk offers a brief introduction to the theory of matroids, a combinatorial framework that generalizes the notion of linear independence beyond vector spaces. We will explore key definitions, fundamental examples, and important properties that make matroids a unifying structure across algebra, graph theory, and optimization. Special emphasis will be placed on the representability of matroids. The presentation is based on a master's thesis.